I healtate to give either the original San I hesitate to give either the original Sanserit or the German version, partly because I would be shooting above the mental horizon of the average reader, and partly because I don't know it myself. The latter reason having a small majority, the said celebrated writer, in commenting on this passage, says it is been appropriated by certain modern authors to indicate that when "two souls, under these circumstances, have a "single thought," it is generally of bargain and sale."

assination of the Sherief of Mecca. LONDON, March 22.—The Renter Tele-gram Company has received the following dispatch:

"Constantinople, March 22—A man dressed as a dervish stabbed the Grand Sherief of Mecca on the 14th instant as be was entering Ejedda, the seaport of Mecca. The Sherief died on the 21st of his wound. The aghation among the Mussulmans is intense. Sir Austin Layard has received a telegram stating that the assassin is a Persian fanatic."

The Family Rudder.

[Virginia (Nev.) Chronicle.]

A Comstocker who was having his hair cut yesterday afternoon gave the barber particular instructions not to remove a long lock that projected in a somewhat unsightly way from the front of his head.

"It don't become you," said the barber.

"Can't help that," said the customer.

"Better let me take it off," said the barber.

"Just you leave it as it is," said the man.
"But," persisted the barber, "I can't give you a smooth, decent cut if I leave the hair so long in front. It will look like the very devil. I can't see what you want it left there for."

"That's because you don't know what it is—you don't know the use of it."

"Yes; it is a bunch of bair, and it is something more than a bunch of hair—it's the family rudder."
"The family what?"

"The family rudder. When things don't go right at home my wife always grabs that lock of hair. She would feel lost without When she gets hold of that she can bandle me-steer me in the right course, so to speak-and when I go in the right course the whole family go in the right course, and all is well. I've got used to it now, and don't mind it. Should I lose my hair and become baid, or should you give me a fighting cut all over, there would be no way of steering me; I should become unmanage sir; don't you disturb the family rudder.'

Naroleon.—"I was educated," he said, "at a military school. Every one said of me, 'That shild will never be good for anything but geometry.' I had chosen a little corner of the school-grounds where I would sit and dream at my ease, for I have corner of the school-grounds where I would sit and dream at my ease, for I have always liked reverie. When my companions tried to usurp possession of this corner I defended it with all my might. I already knew by instinct that my will was to override that of others, and that what pleased me was to belong to me. I was not liked at school, It takes time to make one's self-liked; and even when I had nothing to do I always felt vaguely that I had no time to lose. I entered the service and soon grew tired of garrison work. I began to read novels, and they interested me deeply. I even tried to write some. I often let my-self-dream, in order that I might afterward measure my dreams by the compass of my reveau. "UP TO SNUFF."—In a book by M. Francisque Michel, entitled "Etudes de la Philologie Comparée sur l'Argot," to which is lologie Comparée sur l'Argot," to which is appended a vocabulary of English slang, the phrase "up to snuff" is translated "haut au tabac." The author also translates the word "snuff" in King Lear III., 1, by tabac, unaware, apparently, that in Shakspeare's time tobacco and sruff were unknown, and that no allusion to either occurs in his works. "Snuff" in King Lear, and elsewhere in Shakspeare, means fits of ill-temper, The word is derived from sniff, to betray suspicion or displeasure by the nose, in smelling cion or displeasure by the nose, in smelling out or discovering causes of offence. To be "up to anuf" is to be wary, to be circumspect, to be able to sniff or smell if anything is going wrong, to track by the scent, as in the similar phrase "to smell a rat," and in that used by Hamlet with regard to the dead body of Polonius, "You'll nose him in the lobby." Tobacco snuff was evidently so called because it was sniffed up by the nose.—Notes and Queries. nose .- Notes and Queries.

LADY So-AND-So'S NOVEL —There are, I am told, some ladies and gentlemen who, not content with cutting a figure in fashionable society, aspire to a literary reputation as well, and to that end employ some clever hack to vamp up a novel or a book of travels, to which they append their names as the authors. It is but seldom that these jackdaws are stripped of their borrowed peacock's plumes and held up in their own poor draggled feathers to the ridicule which they deserve. Yet I note that when a novel or a book of travels is announced as forthcoming from the pen of some considerable personage in the beau monde, there is a more general disposition than ever before to remark, with an air of confident ill nature, "I wonder who Lady So-and-so has got to write that new novel of hers?" or, "I suppose young Thingumbob is doing that new book of travel for Mrs. What-d'ye-call-her." The latest question of this sort I have heard asked is, "Who writes the Shah's diaries for him?"—London Society.

The Mayor of a village refuses his authorization to an itinerant quack, who wishes to sell his wonderful Elixir of Life, warranted to cure corns, toothache, consumption, liver-complaint, rheumatism, and boils, and equally available as a cement for broken crockery, an insect-exterminator, and a leather-preservative. His Worship is afraid that the vaunted panacea may contain noxious drugs.

"Ob, there is no danger of that, your Excellency," says the quack, assuringly; "nothing in it but cold water."

"I beg your pardon, then," says the
